

ABSTRACT

Embodiments of the invention describe a silicon oxynitride Bragg grating disposed in a semiconductive layer on an insulating substrate. The grating may be formed of alternating silicon oxynitride elements that differ in a relative composition of oxygen and nitrogen. The different composition elements have different refractive indices that may vary within a desired range.